This morning, we continue a discussion about Screen Time and some of the side effects that are being observed in our world and in our homes. The easy thing to do this morning is to say that others need to hear this and totally ignore the challenge in front of you. A second easy thing to do is to kid yourself and others that this is not a problem of great concern and we can take control of it any time we desire to. The reality of the situation is that we are a world, a nation, a state, a community, and a church that are in the throes of a significant attack and we must have some type of response.

If we are not careful, the things we see, read, and share will lead us to believe a lie about who we are, where we live, and where we are going when this life is over. The positives can most assuredly outweigh the negatives when it comes specifically to social media (or technology at large), but can we honestly say that we are using it in ways to make that a reality? As we think about the side effects of and the new rules for technology, let's try to make certain above all else that we are focused most on the things of God.
