This morning, there will be a significant amount of time spent on the financial aspects of this congregation and its work. The study portion of our worship will also focus on God's view of giving and why it is necessary. Perhaps there might be a feeling of apprehension or even outright frustration over the suggestion that we, as individuals, are needed to consider our giving. Throughout the years, sadly, there have been congregations who have simply had to ignore their needs out of fear that an open, honest discussion about them would drive people away or send the wrong message.

I can speak directly and with absolute peace of mind when I say that we are truly blessed at Rogersville to have men serving as deacons and elders that are desirous of this congregation to not 'just' be a geographical location. These men, their families, and countless other members of this church family are constantly considering ways that we can be a blessing to people in our community, county, and even in our world. In order to achieve these levels of influence, we must be willing to give from our blessed abundance.

I ask that you pray bold prayers in your giving -- bold prayers in your influence -- bold prayers in this congregation's work. And may we never be considered as those who are "withholding" their gift from the God of creation.
