I will miss Milton Chaney. I will miss being asked "What ya preaching on preacher?" and being told afterwards that I "done good." I appreciate the life he lived and his willingness to strive for the souls of others while encouraging the church. With that in mind, the topic for our study this morning could not have come at a more appropriate time.

The unity aspect of the church is one that has been spoken of for decades and will (sadly) be spoken about for however long the Lord allows the world to continue. We in the churches of Christ are autonomous, but that is not cause for us to be divided. Are there those who are erring? Of course, but it should be our aim to try and bring them back to the straight and narrow. Are there those who we may disagree with? Yes, but if they are merely matters of opinion, then shame on us if we claim they are erring. Are there those we have a past history with? Yes, and we had better tread carefully so that we are not guilty of holding a grudge or promoting division.

Ultimately, it should be our aim to be unified within the walls of this building so that we can then set an example in the world.
