If you are like me, occasionally you need to hit the reset button to assess the direction of your life and what will be the outcome of that direction. When we have those moments of reset, it is important to have those around you who won't just tell you what you want to hear, but what you need to hear. In those conversations, it is hard not to take things as personal attacks, but many times they are based in facts and rooted in truth. Therefore, we must be mature enough to take the suggestions, advice, correction, or encouragement and take the next right step forward.

To those on the other side of those conversations, it is important that the truth be spoken in love and with the proper heart behind it. This does not include nagging, doubting, discouraging, or a lack of faith. Instead, if the conversation is coming from a place of love and concern, then it should be in your heart to help the person who is trying to reset. Too many times, we can get caught sitting high on our perch looking down our nose at those we deem to be struggling and forget it is our responsibility to help them. This trickles down to the point that we aren't even cheering them on as they work, we are the stern ruler-toting teacher that can't wait to catch them and smack their knuckles.

We are and will be (for eternity) a family. Understanding that truth ought to have an impact on how we treat each other.

"Brothers and sisters, if anyone is caught in any transgression, you who are spiritual should restore him in a spirit of gentleness. Keep watch on yourself, lest you too be tempted. Bear one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."
-- Galatians 6:1-2
